

FARAMAGAN

TWO SCOTS. ONE CAMERA. ZERO SENSE OF DIRECTION

After 6 years of long distance, Darren and Lauren quit their day jobs to live the day dream. Now they catch flights with each other instead of to see each other, documenting their tales and fails through their blog Faramagan. Far am a gan translates to "where am I going" from the Scot's language, Doric. Likely muttered several times a day by this travelling twosome as their cheeky Scottish charm gets them into all sorts of epic adventures around the globe.

4000 average sessions per month
6000 average page views per month
10 comments on average per post
Figures based on the last 3 months

1000 followers
22% engagement rate
212 average likes per post
16 comments on average per post

649 followers
31K tweet impressions per month
1600 Profile visits per month

591 followers
270K views per month
2700 daily impressions

WHAT DO WE DO?

Not only do we inspire others to quit the day job to live the day dream but we share how to do it with travel tips, budget advice & destination guides. Most importantly we don't just share the sunsets & coconuts. We keep it real. We share our tales AND fails so others learn from our mistakes, trust us and laugh along with our journey.

WHERE HAVE WE BEEN?

Since the adventure began in October 2017 we have visited 17 countries including Iceland, Hawaii, New Zealand and are currently backpacking Australia.

WHY WORK WITH US?

Despite our adventures round the world, we will always remain down to earth. Our honest reviews, genuine advice and cheeky Scottish charm go hand in hand with our technical skill and professional work ethic. We offer guest posts, travel videos, photography and reviews with a reliable turn around.